Kappan* Magazine wins APEX awards

ARLINGTON, Va. — Kappan has won two Awards of Excellence in the annual APEX Awards for Publication Excellence.

Kappan was honored with an Award of Excellence for general excellence in the magazine category for its December 2014 issue about students and mental health. That issue was produced in collaboration with the National Association of School Psychologists. This is the second time Kappan has received an award for general excellence.

Kappan editor-in-chief Joan Richardson won an APEX award for writing for her March 2014 column, "Father knows best," in which she wrote about her belief that generosity and a sense of community support and participation should extend beyond one's own neighborhood. This is Richardson's second APEX award for writing; in 2010, she received APEX's Grand Award, its top honor, for a series of Editor's Notes.
