PDK launches Common Core web site as resource for educators

ARLINGTON, Va. — Kappan has a new Common Core Writing Project

Kappan magazine is seeking exemplary articles from practitioners and researchers for its new online Common Core Writing Project.

Kappan's Common Core Writing Project is intended to be an exchange of ideas about implementation of the Common Core and aimed at providing opportunities for teachers to learn more by writing about their practice. We invite teachers and those who support them to share stories about practical applications and lesson plans as well as stories about the challenges that classroom teachers and others face during implementation.

The Common Core Writing Project articles will be published on a new web site, which will be open to the public. This work is made possible as the result of a partnership with Learning First Alliance's Get It Right campaign.
